Project Description

The project involved the shaping of material to form a mound which was cut, formed and then turfed to produce a spiral viewing mound – one of three in the country.

As part of the project there was the shaping of all the internal land to the park where spiralling paths cut through. The park was fenced off with bespoke metal railings, which were connected at the four corners by a natural stone wall, which was capped with ashlar stone.

To complete the park, the play furniture was installed and this was followed by the safety play surfacing, making it child friendly.
